

I need a job!

Do you need a job and aren't sure where and how to start? Here are a couple online suggestions to get you started.

The Balance Careers staff chose their favorite job search websites after considering the number of listings on each site, ease of use, costs, advanced features, industries and experience levels served, and reputation.

Indeed.com was rated best overall. It's now the largest job site in the world with 250 million monthly users and 10 new job listings every second. It is free to job seekers.

Monster.com was the next runner up. Monster caters to job seekers from all experience levels and work styles whether freelance, temp, part-time, or full-time. However, there is no option to search by salary or experience level unless you pay for the premium platform.

If you're looking for insights about a future employer, check out Glassdoor.com. Glassdoor was created to bring salary transparency and honest company reviews to perspective employees. You can search simultaneously for open jobs and read detailed information on each company's culture.

If you prefer to work from home, Flexjobs.com is a good place to start. They screen remote jobs from over 5,000 companies across the globe. Flexjobs charges $6.95 for a one-week trial, $14.95 for one month, $29.95 for three months and $49.95 for a year in order to apply for posted listings.

Emily Polner, "The 10 Best Job Search Websites of 2020", The Balance Careers, September 12, 2020, <https://www.thebalancecareers.com/top-best-job-websites-2064080>

